COURSE DESCRIPTION

This interdisciplinary course will examine the multifaceted experiences of people of Asian and Pacific Island descent in the United States. Some of the major themes we will explore are: 1) the historical and contemporary manifestations of the social and political category of the “Asian American;” 2) the inter- and cross-ethnic conflicts and solidarities that have marked the history of Asian American social and political struggle; 3) the role of cultural politics and representation in Asian Americans’ attempts to create an identity; and 4) the relationship between histories of Asian American racial formation and contemporary forms of racism, sexism, discrimination, and the activism and efforts of communities of Asian Americans to resist forms of social and political inequality and create spaces of social justice and peace.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Class attendance and participation (20%). Attendance is mandatory. Students are required to do the assigned readings and formulate two questions on the basis of the readings for each class. Students will be called upon at random to express their views or pose their questions on the assigned subjects for a particular week. Students may be asked to attend a lecture by a guest speaker in place of a class period. In these cases, attendance at the lecture is mandatory unless there is an unavoidable scheduling conflict. Missing more than 4 classes will result in the forfeiture of the 20% class credit for class participation.

Group project and presentation (25%). Each student will be part of a 6 – 8 person team (depending on class size) that will be responsible for choosing a topic pertaining to the course to research and present to the class at the end of the semester. Although some class time may be provided for group discussion, students are required to conduct meetings outside of class as well.

Prelim Examination (25%). An in-class exam on materials from the beginning of the semester until March 10.

Final essay (30%). A take-home final consisting of a 7 - 10 page essay that addresses issues raised in class discussion, readings, and lectures. Students will have a choice of questions to answer and will have one week to complete the assignment.

All due dates are final. Late papers will not be graded, and students will receive a zero.
